Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1400 on Tuesday 02 Feb 2021

UK Outlook for Sunday 7 Feb 2021 to Tuesday 16 Feb 2021:
Rather cloudy and cold across the UK on Sunday with wintry showers over eastern parts. An area of high pressure then looks to build to the north, and it will likely feel cold or very cold, especially in brisk easterly winds. There is a chance of conditions being dry at times with widespread overnight frosts, although wintry showers can still feed in from the east coast. Any organised areas of cloud and precipitation arriving from the southwest will not progress very far into the country as a result of the high pressure. However, they can bring the potential for widespread snow across areas where they bump into cold air. Patches of ice and other disruptive wintry hazards remain a possibility for all areas.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.